

A Short Word From Our Florist

I'm Bron. And to me this is personal.

I've spent my career creating beautiful arrangements. I've seen people at their best, and at their worst. I've followed peoples lives: from first dates, to marriage, to children to losing the ones they love the most and witnessed so much love, and loss and beauty. And to offer strength at such vulnerable times to me, that is a very special thing.

Choosing an arrangement on behalf of a loved one is an honour. It is the ultimate gift. The arrangements in this book do not limit your choices (because how can you put a one-size-fits-all tag on a gift?) I encourage you to think of your loved one's favourite colour, their occupation, a favourite memory, a time when you were together and at your happiest. Did they have a favourite pastime? What were they most proud of? Your possibilities are endless.

The flowers in this book are a guide, and may differ with seasonality; we will always replace flowers that are unavailable with similar varieties of an equal or higher value. And since our flowers are the freshest, please take the time to read about Project Blue Hope and learn about the way your loved one's legacy can spread joy throughout our community.

My condolences, and thank you for the opportunity to share my passion with you and your family at this time.

-Bron

Project Blue Hope

Project Blue Hope began in 2014 with the idea that the life of flowers used for once-off purposes such as weddings and funerals shouldn't stop there. Flowers used for Project Blue Hope are re-purposed into smaller jars and distributed among the many health services on the border or to a nursing home, hospital ward or health care provider of your choice. Project Blue hope is an entirely free service and available for most flowers used in services.

Memorial Jewellery

Life is messy, moving, momentous. By nature, it is dynamic and always changing. All people living their unique experiences, often behind closed doors with very few ways to truly be celebrated.

Memorial keepsake jewellery has become so popular in recent years as people are actively looking to immortalise their memories and milestones, making sure their stories are not forgotten.

What Can Be Captured in Jewellery?

Ashes

Hair

Umbilical cord

Breastmilk

With a range of colours and styles available, every piece is unique and treated with the utmost respect and care.
